

A Brief Curriculum Vitae

Dr. Awaë Masae

Dr. Awaë Masae was trained in both Biological Science and Social Science. He received a bachelor degree in agriculture from Prince of Songkla University, a master degree in rural development from Queensland University (Australia) and PhD in development studies from University of Bath (UK). He currently works as an assistant professor in the Department of Agricultural Development, Prince of Songkla University and as a Thailand collaborator of the Research Programme on Wellbeing in Developing Counties (WeD). His research interest includes rural livelihoods and adaptation, and social and political aspects of natural resources management.